

The 54th CNS Annual Meeting is just around the corner, and whether you've already registered (yay!) or you're still figuring it out, we wanted to share a few reasons why this is one event you won't want to miss:

Here are 5 reasons to join us in Charlotte, North Carolina, from October 8-11:

We're still the go-to, child neurology expert-led conference

The 54th CNS Annual Meeting is the can't-miss event of the year. With nationally recognized clinicians, researchers, and educators, this year's event is guaranteed to be a stimulating experience that delivers the latest knowledge and innovations in child neurology.

An expanded program offers more chances for deep-dive discussions and learning

Child neurology is rapidly evolving, and so is our Annual Meeting. With a record number of proposals and abstracts, we've built our most comprehensive scientific program yet, covering everything from advances in disease care to the role of AI in diagnosis. There's something here for every interest.

Celebrations of recent advancements and innovations that strengthen child neurology

Come celebrate the brightest minds in child neurology. We'll open this year's Annual Meeting by honoring our award-winning colleagues and, throughout the event, spotlight Hower, Bernard Sachs, Martha Bridge Denckla, and Philip R. Dodge Young Investigator Award winners — along with our distinguished Lifetime Achievement honorees.

An in-depth focus on clinical care to enrich your day-to-day practice

This year's program is packed with insights across Research Advances and Leadership tracks — plus expanded Clinical Practice content you asked for. With seminars and hands-on workshops on topics like health equity and humanism, you'll gain tools to elevate your practice and patient care.

Unmatched networking with clinical experts, academic thought leaders, and industry partners

Collaboration drives the future of child neurology, and CNS makes it happen. Our Annual Meeting offers meet-and-greets, mentor workshops, and an early-career panel, giving you the connections, resources, and tools to advance as a child neurology clinician or researcher. The Annual Meeting offers endless chances to connect with experts and innovators who share your passion.

yet, don't delay.
